

awful old, you know. Very few of them though can remember their early boyhood, how things were a long time ago. Where did your folks come from, George?)

Hulbert.

(Hulbert?)

Yeah. Fourteen miles from Hulbert. All up and down in there.

(Let's see, Walter Foster, did you know him?)

Yeah, is he still living?

(Yeah, he's still living.)

He's not very much Indian.

(Not, very much.)

His mother must have been Indian wasn't she?

(Yeah.)

Wilburn Beattie, is he still living?

(Yeah, he's in a rest home down there now, in Tahlequah. He's getting awful feeble.)

He's getting old, he's a old man when I was a boy. When we was boys you know it. That Cap Beattie, he went--he's mentally ill, he died a long time.

You didn't know him did you.

(No.)

That was his brother.

(Now, Bob Beattie, I knew him.)

Yeah, I don't know whatever became of him.

(You know Bob Beattie was over at Pawhuska with Wilburn at one time.)

Bob Cook was too. I think that was--they sent him to Vinita from there.

(Yeah, I visited Wilburn about three times now down there in that rest home.

He said when weather gets good and warm, he wanted me to take him out driving
