

to report to the tribe. That's way back there.

TRIBAL BUSINESS COMMITTEE

(When did they start having this Committee?)

Cecil: After school--1920, somewhere in there. Year of 1920.

That's when Rainy Mountain was closed. They began to close that school so they suggested we ought to have a spokesman for the tribe--a Committee, and they selected them.

(Now Ahpehtone was still living then?)

Cecil: Yeah, he was living. He was the chief.

(How old was he at the time?)

Cecil: Oh, he was way up there, about seventy, I guess. He was a grown man when I know him.

(Well, maybe we ought to quit for the day. I think I been working you pretty hard.)

(More irrelevant conversation and end of tape.)
