

FAMILY RELATIONSHIPS

And in the company that my mother--she was married to a Collins, George Collins. He was from I believe it was Kansas, and Nowata and Alluwee. Her second husband was a white man. And she said they, Mama said she didn't know why, but my grandfather and grandfather and mother but she had married George Collins. He was Cherokee. He was kin to Aunt Mary McCoy--I think she was a Mayes. Anyway they settled further north. And they came on and crossed the Verdigris River, and stopped there and settled in that country afterward known as Coowela. And then Mr. Campbell, you know, at Alluwee--he married one of the Journeycake girls. Mr. Charles Journeycake had eight daughters. And Mrs. Campbell, her name was Adeline--Emeline--and she had a twin sister--no Mrs. Campbell's name was Emeline, and she had a twin sister Adeline. They called one Em and the other Ad. They were at Bartlesville. Bartlesville was named for him. Of course he was the father. She had the three daughters, and then she had the son Joe. But his mother was the oldest daughter of this Charles Journeycake. And then, as I said, my mother was married to George Collins.

COOWELA COMMUNITY NAMED FOR D. W. LIGHT

(What's the name of that community or church?)

That was Coowela--we had school--we used our schoolhouse for the church.

(Where was it located from Claremore?)

North--

(Straight north.)
