

had to--They had hay and sage. You had to stick your head in there (in the sage) so you can breathe. Four days and four nights. Without food. Without water. And they claimed they could tell what was happening in the camp all the time. I know when my father and grandfather came out. His daughters--he had five daughters--they all ran out there and greet him and help him. Of course he's weak. One of them girls said, "Papa, you got a new grandchild." And he said, "Did Sitting Man come--be born? Come to earth?" He knew it was a boy, and he already gave him a name--Sitting Man. And I got a grandson named Sitting Man today, named after that cousin of mine. "Yeah," he said, "My boy came two nights ago." You know women didn't stay in bed more than two days or a day and a half after they had childbirth. They just get right up. So he knew that he had a grandson born when he was in there. All those things- I got a little boy (grandson) named Jessee Hamilton. He's got two Indian names. I gave him that Sitting Man through my cousin grandfather named. And then my oldest brother, Henry--I said, "Brother, you've got a grandson." "Well," he says, "Did one Arrow come?" "Yeah, we got a grandboy. I named him "Sitting Boy." "No," he said, "I'm going to give him this name, too," he said, "One Arrow." It means the main arrow you're going to shoot to take effect. He said, "It's through your rating--all these tribal affairs, Washington, courts--you've always been the main one. Just like we got one fine arrow for shooting--to shoot to kill or to shoot to take effect. It's through you that I named that boy that." So he's got two names. nixw'w'uunw. --"One Arrow" name. A single arrow. That's the name my brother gave him. Through me. But I named him hinεnθiwk --that's what my grandfather sat in that lodge four days and four nights, and fasted.

(What does that mean?)
