

--another group, seem like them, that's the way they did those things, and they all worked together and then they had this leader, this (Osage name); he's the leader, they pick him before they come out here, they pick him. He's the boss. It don't make no difference what he says, well, that's the way it goes. "Cause they already got him for that. Sometimes they make bad choice and maybe--but anyway they stay with it, see. And they all carry out their duties and they even have camping places and everything. They know just right where they're going. So that's the way they come on these hunts and all that, and then they have people that knows how to track this game, find the game and all such as that. They have all these people--well, they had it. Whatever it was they're going to have to have on this--anything they might run into, well they were prepared for it. All those things, that's the way they did, they carried it out. And then the story about Hazel's information--there's another story about just lately well Hazel, she's the one she went --heard those people talking up there. Someone went to those NCAI, North Dakota, I think. She heard some people talking on the streets there, parked in a car. She heard some people talking. They was talking Osage she said. They was talking Osage and she listened. And--but they never did get to them, but they found out where they were from. They were from North Dakota somewhere. And she said they were talking Osage. 'Course these other tribes, the Omahas and a lot of tribes have a lot of words you know, similar - same way they sound. Said these people, they were talking Osage. And so then we got to thinking about this story we heard, just like on this hunt, I was talking what they come out this way. When they come to the time they going to divide this meat up, this meat they going to divide it up. Well, this headman, well, he divide it up. He give, I guess he didn't divide it equally. He didn't divide it equal like he was suppose to. He give more of it to his people, some of his people.