

with mama and daddy. And he took care of the boys. Well, he stayed there until I was born and then he went to--oh, a few years later, why he'd just go from one of the family to the next, you know. And then when Uncle Bud started having his children, he moved in with them and he kept their kids for a long time. And then--)

That name sounds familiar.

(He used to--he died a few years ago. His family, they got in touch with us and they thought, you know, we'd want to know, and gosh, he was just like one of the family, you know we really did like him.)

Yeah, Mabel's brother, Harry, I don't know where he lives now. The last time I saw him he looked, he said, "You know you make me feel old." I said, "Well, why?" Well, he said, "I heard you was a grandmother." I said "Well, I am." He said, "It's seems like no time I used to carry you around." (Laughter) He talked to my brother and then--he'd say "I used to carry you around, you was just a baby." And here you're a grandma." And those Maye's.

Jim Mays used to stay with us for a long time.

Daughter: (not clear)--there with all them kids and-- (Sentence not clear)--they come over to Jesse for two years. And he stayed out there. He used to mop for auntie and them. He wanted one of them big old sailor coats. What do you call 'em?

(Pea jackets.)

Yeah. He'd have one of them and he'd lap it over with a safety pin and he'd be just mop away and have this cap on. (Laughter) We went there one time and he was mopping. Jimmy walked in and just stand there like this. I looked at him--what are you doing? He said well, I have to salute him. He was just moppin' away and he raised up and he said, oh go on boys. I'd get so tickled. (Laughter) (Oh that's the one they called Ham.)

Uh-huh.. Lois said she was in the hospital one day and said one of the nurses
