

came by and she said "Hey, you seen Jimmy?" She said, "No," I didn't know who Jimmy was. She said "Ham." Some colored man a lot older than him stole--I believe it was a ham wasn't it? They arrested him and they got him and the police didn't want to send him off because you know it was the first time he's ever--and he's a good boy. So they got--they asked Jess if he could be paroled to him and Jess told them yes. That's how come they call him Ham. (Laughter) You know--do you remember the colored woman, Susie Sizemore? And they say they kept her and she could talk Osage. She stayed with your grandparents, out on the farm.

(Now Uncle Wakon had one--I don't know--oh Terry Watts was her name and when she died that's who she was--she was crying for Uncle Wakon and Aunt Molly.) Yeah, I remember.

(When Aunt Molly got sick with diabetes he sent her to a cooking school to learn how to cook for diabetics. She was a good cook until she learned how to cook for diabetic.) (Laughter)

Did she work hospital awhile?

(She may have.)

I believe, seemed to me like she cooked out there for awhile. 'Cause I was out there and I was braggin' on how good food taste. And I remember them calling her Carrie. I remember when she worked for mama.

(Was that after they quit?)

Yeah, I think it was after they quit.

('Cause she didn't keep her long after they quit.)

Well, I'm pretty sure it was her. I know they asked me if I knew her and I said no I don't think so. So they said well, we'll tell her anyway. And--but I remember when she was, cause one time I took Molly Gray Horse, she was supposed to get Wakon's supper.
