

(Does she remember the dream dancers having a dance at all? Was that in her time?)

(Cheyenne)

She said, "After I grew up to a certain age, I just began to hear about it." (Cheyenne) Her father was one of the members-- Osage. (Cheyenne) She said there was one old woman that's still living up there--up the river. This Roy Nightwalker's mother. Her father was a member of it.

Kate: (speaks Cheyenne)

(Interruption)

(I wonder if you know why this old man, Real Bull, decided to organize another War Dance group?)

Birdie: (speaks Cheyenne) She said that just about the time this Real Bull came to live here in Oklahoma, he saw that this other, Dream War Dance clan, was dying out. And that's why he reorganized them in his way.

(When he organized them in his way is that when the reservation has been established here?)

(Cheyenne) Yes. At that time he had just now organized it.

(Would she know what year, maybe or what event-- Maybe she could remember what event year it was, about.)

(Cheyenne) Well, it wasn't so awful long since he came down, so it must have been around that time she says. It's not so awful far back. He used to live over the hill she said.

(Did she ever hear why he decided to move to Oklahoma?)

(Cheyenne) He married a woman from here, named Twin Woman (Cheyenne).

(Do you know how they got acquainted--how he met her?)

(Cheyenne) The Real Bull came to Oklahoma to visit, and he must
