

(Do other members come to attend that or just the boy?)

(Cheyenne) She already told you once that everybody takes part. Whoever eats them--whoever eats dogs is a member and they're the ones that come--(Cheyenne) And this Frank Pawpaw--that we came to see--the reason they call him the "Fork Man", he's the one that get's the dog meat out of the soup. That's why he is called the "Fork Man." (Cheyenne) She said, "I remember those three Fork Men," she said, "John Hill and Roy Hamilton and then Frank Pawpaw. And Frank was the main one, the first one."

(What kind of forks did they use?)

(Cheyenne) Just like of two--

(This feast that they had here, did she have it outside?)

(Cheyenne) They use sticks (for forks). They shave them into forks. Wood.

Kate: Wood, no forks--just wood.

Birdie: Not a white-man fork--fork' stick.

Kate: It's hot. They have to dip it out from the soup.

(Well, did you get to eat some too?)

(Cheyenne) She said if the members don't want to eat the dog, she said, they must pay somebody to eat it. They give you that dogmeat and maybe so much money. They give it to you--just like giving away something. She said that's the way they give their food away, if they don't want to eat it.

(What kind of dog did they get?)

(Cheyenne) A young dog. (Cheyenne) Just a common dog she said. It can't be this little bitty--what you call them? Chihuahua dogs. Or it can't be a big ugly hound. Just a young common dog.

(Can it be any color?)
