

No, just a common dog.

(Oh, do they have it inside or outside--when they have that feast?)

(Cheyenne) They put up a tipi. (Cheyenne)

(Did you put up a tipi?)

Yes, she put up tipi. She put it up down here.

(How many people came?)

(Cheyenne) She said all the members were here. They notified each other. They know their own members.

(Do they still have dances today?)

(Cheyenne) She said that was the last one that they had, when she give a feast for this Gilbert. She said it was the last one.

(Who's the head of it today?)

Kate: (speaks Cheyenne) I think this boy's--Alec Allrunner is one of them. He's gone now.

(Cheyenne) She said this Frank Pawpaw was.

Kate: We got the pole where they got that flag. We had a big pole to hold up flag in front of that tent.

Birdie: She said they were going to have another one, this spring.

Frank Pawpaw wanted to have it since he was getting old, and so they are still taking care of this flagpole.

Kate: Yeah, I think we were the last ones that done that for Gilbert. He's my nephew, and I'm proud of him. He was in the 45th Division and he was wounded in France. (Cheyenne)

Birdie: She said, "I also changed his name." She said, "I name him according to his outfit that he was in--the 45th Division. And I named him 'Chief-Coming-Up,' because of the 45th is a great organization."

(Did she make up that name or was--?)
