

perhaps we can obtain some new skills, some new means of recovery of oil. And again we will have the blessing of our Lord, and it will be wonderful again to have all of the wonderful things we have had in the past because of the wealth that has been provided for our tribe. There's many things that perhaps can be said about the Osage. There's many things that have already been said about the Osage. But I'm sure that all of the past now is in the archives of time. And the Osage of the future will be a different Osage than his fore-father were. And will be one that is intelligent, one that will go out to take his place among society and the world to come. And, oh there's great opportunities awaiting the Indian people now, even now, but yet we're hesitant to take a hold of them, take full advantage of these opportunities. But I'm sure that in the future, our young people, the children that we have now, will be better equipped to go out and to take advantage of these opportunities.

YOUNG OSAGE MEN WILLINGLY FIGHT FOR AMERICA

In the present day we have many difficulties, trials and tribulations, so to speak. Many of our races are rioting and revolting, rebelling against our government. But we're grateful for the fact that many of our Indian boys are not participating in these exhibitions. I know that many of the demonstrations, however, are justified in some way or another. But I believe that there are other ways of reaching those that are in authority - that have the power to change. There're other ways of reaching them and discussing these matters in a peaceful way. I know that today there're many in discouraged conditions about our war, our foreign policy in Viet Nam. I know many of our Indian boys have gone across the water and given their lives, and we have brought them home, we've given them the Indian honors and rites and put them away. And I imagine that will go on all the time in the future also. In the past,
