

Empty room. Both of these was empty. Well, this friend of mine's wife, my wife's cousin, she died in this room. And they say if anybody dies in a room, their spirit never leaves that room. And they're the ones that cause this fact to twist up--spirit--owls. Well, I didn't believe it. We was living there and my wife--it must have been about eleven or twelve o'clock. --Somewhere in around there--well, anyway, we were asleep and had a-- we done blowed out our light, and it was kinda moon light, and these boys was sleeping in here. I don't know what it was, but we were sleeping and these two boys-- one of 'em must of been about twelve, and the other one was about ten -- sleeping in the same bed. They said they wasn't asleep yet. This door, somebody opened this door. They said somebody opened this door. First before he opened it (Guy knocks on the table) he knocked on it. Knocked on the door and they start to sit up and listen. See who it was. They know that the house-- the room -- was empty. And there was a outside door over here, but it was locked, and this was locked. They knowed--somebody knock on that door and they sit up and somebody open the door and start to come in. And they saw it, and it didn't look like a human, so they jump out of bed and they run in there. They run in here. They run into our bedroom and they said, "Something's coming in our room. Something's come in our room." And it was sort of moonlight but we didn't have no lamp. We didn't have no electricity. And I knew that the outside door -- room was empty. "There ain't nothing in there-- you go back in there." "No," they said, "Something open the door. Knock on there and open the door." And I come in there. I took some matches and the door was shut. After I come in, the door shut. I open the door. As I open the door it look like a whiff went over my face--I could feel a wind. I didn't see nothing, but I felt a wind. And I struck the matches, and sure enough, there ain't
