

white man was the handsomest boy! He was white and had pretty hair. No doubt he was blond-headed. Oh, they thought that was something different. They wanted him for their son-in-law too. So this next to the oldest sister went with this white boy. Well, they thought she was going to go with him, but instead, it turned out the other way. See, at these were just getting ready to get married--the older sister and this boy. Well, this older sister got stuck on this white boy. So she just went crazy over him. And kind of pushed her sister away from him. So this white man worked fast. This white man's got a scheming mind and can out-think an Indian. So he beat this Indian to his girlfriend. And she married him (the white man). And naturally, this couple is going to give them the first of everything. So they gave them this tipi where this boy was supposed to move in with his new bride. Well, it went to this white man and the oldest sister. And it left the youngest sister out. She got left behind. Well, he went for her. He said, "I'll fix her. I'll make her think, I'll make her say 'I wish I hadn't done it.'" He was thinking all the time. So he married that youngest sister. And they had to put him on the side of this--in this round tipi here; here's the best place, and this white man and his wife were there. And this Indian boy and his girl friend, they laid on the other side. She became his wife. And then after a few nights this white man woke up. And when he opened his eyes, he saw a kind of a red glow, coming from somewhere. Oh, it was such a bright red--some kind of a--just like when anything glows. And he pushed his covers and looked around and he saw that couple--their bed was just all in red. Everything was just sparkling and shining on top of their