

Oh - Old Sam Black.

(Un Hunnh. I guess she stayed about a week out there. Her sister and her and some other lady. She said there's too many-colored people in Memphis.)

Yeah. Headquarters there. Then another time I went to Columbia, South Carolina. I drove down there. First day I drove to Memphis. From Memphis, drove to Columbia, South Carolina. I went down - that was right before they ready to go to Europe. They gettin' ready to go to Europe then. It's a long way down there. Two days of it for me. Got into Atlanta just a few days before Christmas. Cars lined up and I was looking for a road. (laughter) Stopped at a station there. Said, "I'm looking for highway so and so." He said, "You are on it." You know it was kinda light when we got into that town and it was dark before I got out - traffic was so heavy. We drove from there to South Carolina that night. I didn't see daylight. Got there at dark and left there at dark. So I don't know what it look like. When we left there it was about 4 o'clock in the morning. It was dark. It was daylight when we got into Georgia. I come through five or six states. But Georgia was daylight so I don't know what South Carolina look like north of Columbia. Drove all through Georgia, cross Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee. We got back to Memphis, they had one of the biggest snow storms they had ever had. Snow was st on then. I remember that snow was slick. I was comin' in - traffic was heavy. It was a good twelve hours for me to drive it. It was a long ways down there. Went all through Arkansas right through Arkansas, then Muskegee.

OSAGES GO TO CO. ORADO IN SUMMER IN EARLY DAYS

(Didn't a lot of Osages - didn't they used to go down in Arkansas a lot?)

Yeah. A lot of them go to Hot Springs. They had to go down there to take baths, I think. Take those mineral baths. Don't they have those down there?

(Un Hunnh.)

Yeah. They did. And then I guess some of 'em went down there to races, but I -
