

one or not. I know my father had lived in one. I don't think after I was married I ever lived in a log house. But we had a frame house on our farm. It's between Chelsea and Friar Creek. There's the only two places--well, when my father and mother first come here, they didn't have any children then--built a little log cabin down on Pryor Creek, well, there come a flood and washed everything they had away. And then he went up a little further on the creek, and built another place, and he put an orchard out there; and he always had we always called it the old orchard. And then, he still went higher up on the hill like, and built a house. Well, there's where us children were born, all but the youngest. And then he built a nice house up on the prairie like.

(End of Interview.)