

he had about 1500 rounds of high-powered ammunition. So they put him in jail. Well, they, he didn't like that too well, and Poe, they was a puttin' up down there, Poe's house, that's out from Okmulgee. And these outlaws was there, that Hart Poe's nephew. And he told them here in Nowata--he said if they'd let him out, he'd give the boys away, down there. And help 'em catch 'em. And he did. And they let him out, give him his ammunition, went right on down there with him, and then he kept them notified after that, the law there, all the time--what they was at and what they was doin'. Poe, Hart Poe. And they stayed there, camped there, just a mile and half from his place. And they they robbed Harry that's out down there on the other side, about 35, 40 miles. Why they had two cars. Hart Poe, Oscar Poe, and the two Hart boys, they in one, and Tucker and Littler was in the other, that was the other two bank robbers. They got out there about 2 miles, and Poe's, their car played out. Something got wrong with it. And they just went and hid, two of 'em did, and left Harry Hart workin' on the car. And the posse come right on. And they, he told them, said them fellows in the cars had gone on, passed him, he said, went on. And Oscar Poe and Bill Hart was laying out there just about 50 yards, in the grass, and they didn't see them, of course. And Littler and Tucker went on, they wouldn't wait. They wanted them to wait and help 'em fix the car. And of course, they'd just robbed the bank, and they went on. Well, the posse went on, and Harry kept working on the car, but he never did get it started. Then Hart and Poe, Tucker and Littler they went on down a ways and this posse caught up with them, and killed Tucker. He had $5000 in his pocket. They shot Littler, didn't kill him, but they shot him. Then, the Hart boys walked on back to their camp that night, that was 35 miles. They walked on back there. And then that, course, there knew just exactly what they was doing all the time, cause their uncle had told them, was keeping them posted.
