

was Cherokee Indian man, she was Cherokee. Her name Ellen Moore. And she would love to hear me talk about old times. And I told her the people--how we go over on Saturday evening and stay all night and have dinner on Sunday. She said "Oh, how I wish they'd do that now."

SHE RAISED SEVERAL SETS OF CHILDREN NOT HER OWN

At that time, my daughter had died and left me with three little bitty children and I had--they'd gettin' up great big kids, and she said, "How I do wish they'd do that now." I said, "Ellen, if you'd see me comin' across that field with them children," I said, "You'd take to that weed patch like a scared rabbit." She said, "You just try me and see if I do." She was a good old girl. I had them four--I had taken three of 'em. I was young then. Then I'd had just one child of my own. And none of the folks didn't seem to want to take them little ones. Well, I was young and not very well experienced with raising children. So, I took 'em when none of the rest of the folks didn't seem like wanted 'em. And I kept 'em till he married again, three or four years. Then, my brother's wife died and left him with three. I taken them and kept them about four and half years. He married again. And then my daughter died and she left three. I raised them grown and married. I raised four of my own. I told 'em that I raised kids for everybody since Adam and Eve.

HER PHILOSOPHY ON FAMILY LIFE

God just created Eve for a helpmate. He didn't aim for her to get a job and go to work like women does now, you know. She was a helpmate to old Adam and to raise children. But, Boy, they been doin' that a long time.

(Yeah, a long time.)

I hate to see a young mother have a little baby and get a baby sitter and get her a job and go off to work somewhere. I hate to see that. I sure do (static interference)--whether it's teaching or preaching or anything she puts herself
