

Well, it's six miles south of Carnegie and about four mile east. They got the oil field over there. Extension of this Apache oil field runs in there. They got about five or six wells on it.

But I didn't get none of it. And the place joins it belongs to my cousin. The oil company just lease half of it, but ninety-five thousand dollars. Just to lease it. They didn't sell the place, they just lease. And my brother's place here and mine. He sold his for nine thousand, I sold mine for four thousand.

(What's your cousin's name that got that lease?)

Tennison Tobah. His widow--he died before he got the lease--his widow got it.

Adelaide. Adelaide Tobah. A I D E Tobah. That's right. But before she married, her name was Tonmoi. Tonmoi--it was her father. He's still living.

(Well, did your folks have an allotment down at Mt. Scott?)

Yes, that's where I was born. I wrote a story about my life. I wanted to send it to that lady--
