

Osage: Go to the doctor now, it'll cost about fifteen dollars.

(That's right.)

Osage: I think that's good medicine--Mule Tail. (Laughter)

(Yeah, it's a good medicine.)

It sure is good medicine.

(When you got bad stomach.)

This now (not clear) medicine, they cost money.

(You bet it does.)

Osage: You know these Indians--go to one of these Indian doctors--arthritis or something like that. Well, it's not everybody knows the same things, you know, well you get another Indian then you go get a different kind, you get another one when you go to this one. Some different. Some use different kinds, you know. Couldn't go to doctor like they do now.

(That's right.)

Osage: Didn't have no cars.

(No, people would walk or go horseback.)

NEVER KNEW OF A STARVING INDIAN

Osage: That's right. A man talked to Peters about how the Indians were living. I guess Peter told him they were starving or something. They had it in the papers.

(He told Kennedy Indians were starving. I never did see one.)

I didn't either.

(I never saw no starving Indians.)

I don't think Indians starve, no way, I mean, I don't think you can starve them.

(No, you can't starve them.)

No, that's right. The Lord is going to give them something.

(That's right, He'll show what they get out there.)
