

You could catch one, go to Muskogee, come back, fool around, come back.

NAMES OF EARLY DAY FAMILIES

(Well, you still have a few Indians still living around here, don't you?)

Yeah. We have Scott Smith, he lives up here. Several. You get in around Little Rock down there, several--a lot of Blossoms.

(Yeah.)

Quite a few of them.

(Yeah, I talked with a few of them that live out in here. All seem to be nice people.)

Yeah. Used to be a few more used to live up around courthouse. They all gone.

(Yeah.)

(Not clear) --he went there.

(Yeah, there's still several Indian cemeteries around, I notice. That they still use.)

Yeah. There was one up here that they hardly ever used anymore up there at the old Saline Courthouse, up there right by the road.

(How old is that cemetery?)

Oh, I don't know. It's older than I am.

PLANNING FOR WINTER FEED ON FARM IN EARLY DAYS

I was born right over there. We just moved one time. We moved right over there. I'm 71. Yeah, we just moved one time--moved from there, here. Well, I guess everyone wondered why I didn't leave out. I just thought "Well, I'd never have anything anyway." I was satisfied with the whole thing. We just moved here in about '35. We went back and planted a corn crop. We got a pretty nice piece of ground back there. (Not clear) --it got up 'bout that high and (rest of sentence not clear). Well, we didn't even get it. We had a little spot there that had a little roasting ears on it, so we went and gathered those. And we didn't have any corn to fatten the hogs. We fattened some, but it was awful little thin meat. (Laughter). But we made out and had
