

jobs--doesn't benefit the Indian whatsoever--that I know of. (referring to Oklahoma Indian Affairs Commission)

(Didn't they come over here to some meeting?)

They come to a Watonga meeting once or twice.

NEED FOR JOBS, EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES:

(What did they try to do?)

Well, they spoke about the programs and the possibility of reaching them in the big offices where they were. Any problems they want. But they wouldn't do no good. A man has to go down there on his own expense, fool around there and maybe get drunk (voice fades out).. We don't want to beg. We don't want no money coming to us without earning it, that we're not entitled to. All I like to see is for our people to have a chance to work. Now there's lot of good housekeepers among the Indians. Now you take out in Mexico and Arizona--even Wyoming--you find girls in restaurants and dime stores and even in Kodak stores, selling, and merchandise (sing). Working in there. Well, that's what I'd like to see. Now they have what they call electronic training there in Wyoming last time I was up there--whole family working. Man was working for the Highway Department and the wife had studied electronics and she had a job. She had to travel nineteen miles every day to get to her job--her and her sister and three or four others. Group, dispersed, you know, give 'em jobs--good places--operators of all those things. And the manufacture of things, you know, like electronics--

HEALTH SERVICES FOR UNDERPRIVILEGED INDIAN CHILDREN:

(You know these little kids that we were mentioning while ago--when they go to school they don't have the proper clothes and nobody combs their hair and fixes them up neat--does anybody do any kind of work with those little kids?)

Not unless they're taken to a private place. Like this Bob Stegall, he takes (unintelligible phrase) clothes, shoes, something like that. And then sometimes he'll take a boy to the barber shop and sometimes he'll take them places where if they need a pair of glasses, get them fitted. He brings them to Watonga--there's an oculist there--get fitted out and if they break their glasses he brings them
