

daylight the next morning, he slipped off over the hill, and he got another one. So, they was plenty of turkeys to catch in them days. And there's plenty of deer in there then too. But he didn't have nothin' but an old cap ball rifle, as long as from here to that wall. (laughter)

(Well.)

(not clear) was over on, back from Stilwell, kinda down the creek. I was in there when they run that railroad through there. I lived out below Westville, and that was the starting of Westville.

(Well.)

Old Dan Rawles and Hollands, he married a Holland, they lived there then, all the Hollands. Well, the Hollands is about all scattered off and dead, I guess. I haven't heard of none of them in a long time. Old Dan, he died up in his nineties.

(Yeah.)

INCIDENTS AND MORE SHOOTINGS IN AREA OF COURTHOUSE

I went on one or two of them Indian fishing trips. They'd beat up buckeye, and where there was a big hole of water, they'd put this buckeye, at the upper part of the hole, you see. Well, the fish come down and drunk from that... and it'd kill the fish. And that's the way they got their fish. But the trouble was it'd kill little ones and all. Now where I lived over there on Rose, on little creek, had a creek runnin' right down through my place. There was a bunch of them. Beat up some buckeye and slip in to the upper part of my place there, and poison it. Well, old Red John Duncan down there, he's just a mile below me. It, I think, killed one or two of his cattle. And he was goin' sue me for it. So, I just went to him and told him. I says, "If you want to do anything, pop your whip." I said, "It's old George Smith, that preacher, Indian preacher that done that." And I said, "I can prove it." (laughter.)
