

Yeah, they tell a lot of stories, but a lot of them I forgot.

(I know you were telling a different one the other day about a ball.)

Those, are uh, some kind of medicine man that had certain powers.

THE BALL THAT COULD DOUBLE THINGS:

Of course, they practiced black magic in those days, and the man and the woman were living, and uh, they had a little kid, and I guess it was their grandchild. He uh, wanted to play with something, course he didn't have a brother or sister and he was a lonely child. His grandfather had certain powers and he could do things, so this little boy said, "Grandpa could you make me a little wagon I could play with?" "Yes, I can do that " so he made him a little wagon. So he played with that for a while and after a while he got bored with that, playing with, and he want some other toy, and he said, "Grandpa, can you make me a ball to play with? " Course the grandfather was a little bit reluctant to make him a ball. The grandkid was persistent and kept after the grandfather to make him a ball, so after a while grandpa gave in and said, "I'll make you a ball, only thing," he says, "Don't ever throw this ball on top of the roof and let it roll back down." He says, "All right, grandpa, I won't do that." This grandfather made him a ball and this grandkid played with it, and oh he played with it for some time and he got bored with it and he got to wondering, I wonder why grandpa told me not to throw this ball up on--the roof. So he just got curious and he said, "I'm just going to throw this thing on top of the roof and just see what will happen." So he threw the ball on top of this roof, it rolled back down, hit the little wagon, course immediately, there was two wagons. This ball had certain powers, that's why the grandpa wouldn't--didn't want him to throw the ball on top of the roof. When it came back down the wagons become two, course this really surprised this little kid. He didn't know such a thing would happen, so he picked it up and threw it on top of the roof and it came back down and hit that boy on top of the head, immediately two children appeared, now there was two children. That's why the grandpa didn't want him to have the ball, because this ball had certain powers. And I think they said that this grandpa had certain type of snake powers, I guess this grandpa could feel certain things were happening, I guess he could tell that this boy did something he wasn't supposed to do. Things that were taboo as far as his medicine was concerned,
