

used to be? You never seen it?

(I don't think I ever saw it.)

Well, anyhow you know that river bridge along that river. People used to camp 'round there. Yeah, they camp. There's lot of camp there. And used to be just-- about--bottom, draw, just like this (?)--it's kinda hill like. And there's a store here, and 'nother store and 'nother store. There's four stores they go to. They buy things.

(What were the other stores?)

Well, the other one's name, this was--this first store they call it "Red Store."

I don't know the man's name, though, but "Red Store," they call it. And this is Mr. Boke, Charley, and, us--let's see now--how do they call this man's name?

I just can't think of that name. I know his name but I can't think of it. It's been so long. Been long time. See now I don't think about those until we got started teaching and oh, everthing I just think about. Now like you told me you was coming today. So the other night I sit here. I think. I think about lot of things..

I think about tipi, and how people fix their quilt with that buffalo hide and how they fix their blanket and how they fix their meat and how they go ahead and hunt buffaloes and everthing. I think about everthing. I sit here till maybe 'bout one or two o'clock. I sit here thinking, thinking 'bout those things when you told me you was coming. And after I went to sleep next morning I got up. I told my granddaughter.

She said, "Grandma, how come hou're sitting up?" "Well, I was just thinking about lot of things what I was gonna tell to Judy, 'cause she told me she's coming Tuesday.

So I was just thinking about what I'm gonna tell her. I got all those things lined up," I said. "She might have something else to want to know and what this I know,

I got lined up," I said. "But it could be something else she want find out," I said.

"Yeah," she said. "You cught to know lots," she said. "You been here long time,"
