

Yeah, Stella Carsolowry and her sister down at Carsolowry School.

(Yeah, she lives back over this was, doesn't she?)

Yes.

(What schools did they have when you were going to school around here?)

Oh, I went to Carsolowry School.

(You went to it.)

It was about mile and half. Didn't have no buses them days. Had to go by foot. Horseback.

(Went to church down there too, when you were young fellow?)

Yeah. The schoolhouse was the church house. Down on the west side of the road about a mile and back west.. And they moved that school off and then built another one down there.

(What did they call that? Was it stone or brick schoolhouse back here about four miles, well between here and (name not clear)?)

She is not here anymore.

(Of course she died last spring. Uh-huh, that's the one. Yeah, that was in W.P.A. days?)

Old Sam had corn on his toes, you know, and he cut his shoe right along in there so his toes stick out, I guess, and I don't know how that old son-of-bitch kept from freezing. (laughter) --probably had a little drink.

(Yeah. Probably had a little half pint.)

Yeah boy, we had a lot of fun around there.

(Yeah, he was telling me about he use to carry half pint and called it pumpkin seed. Said, "In cold weather, I used to carry my pumpkin seeds.")
