

to be fixed up. And he said, "We never set down but what the table is surrounded by outsiders little kids." And he said, "I just grow tired about that." (static on tape).

(Well, you have an atmosphere of peace and tranquility here that you don't have over there.)

No, we haven't had much trouble over here like those people do I don't guess. Seems like we have no need to go over there unless need for a doctor. I said to my daughter, we was talkin' one evenin'--my daughter from Washington. I said, "Everything is so uncertain now. This trouble that they're having, they can't blame it on to the Indians."

(No, they can't.)

It must be the whites.

(It certainly is.)

I heard over the television what they said about Chicage, they said it would have to be the outside people come in 'stead the citizens of Chicago. But I can't see what they get out of that.

(I don't either. Not when we look back to--well, when I was a small child and when you were a child, something like that was unheard of, undreamed of.)

I can remember having rallies, Presidential rallies. My daddy was a Democrat and he was a great worker in the elections. Sometimes he went all over the country.

(No they never had any trouble in the older days of, like they have now days, everybody tried to get along with each other.)

I don't know you see if--but I can't remember such as this, riotin' and ever thing on a President election or anything like that when John Kennedy was killed. Seem like that just started everything.

(That started it then.)

When the kids was here and we was talking about it and they say, "Mama what you reckon what is the matter with those people?" And I said, "Well,
