

Barron Fork over there in them flats and they say that he make it. Ain't been many years ago my daughter, runs that little store, she bought some from him and she brought me a gallon. He sold it for three dollars a gallon, but this old boy up there wants four dollars. I don't know how many he made, I ain't saw any lately. If you passin' the road, the go round up there.

(Do people still have orchards in the country?)

They ain't none close by, but over towards Stillwell plenty of 'em.

(They used to have orchards though, long time ago, didn't they?)

Yeah, they used to have little orchard here, but they have family size, two, three acres orchard for a family. They go some pretty good size orchards here.

(Yeah, they have. Oh, times have sure changed.)

Yeah. Fact is, I don't think they's any of 'em even raises a garden, potato patch, anything. They jest quit. Pasture a little bit.

RICH BOTTOM LAND FOR FARMING

(Well, this is rich ground in here.)

Yes. It's bottom land. Yes, my place here raise alfalfa jest like river bottom.

(This kind of soil in here would raise most anything, I guess.)

Yeah. Raise corn, we raised lots of corn when the boys was both at home we raised 'bout a thousand bushels of corn ever year, corn, alfalfa. My boy ain't got none. The crab-grass got so bad on this place. He sweated it out a year or two. 'Bout two, three years is long as it can stay. That grass'll just sweat anything out. He's got lespedeza. That's pretty good grass and he put up 'bout a thousand bales of lespedeza. It's pretty good hay. I can get more than that. I guess we got 'bout sixteen hundred bale. I got
