

And that's Old Buck Clay. He's got his hosses and mules and cattle, hogs--well his wife, she's got chickens, turkeys, geese, guineas and ever thing. They the only two now, staying up with old times. He farms every year, got a pretty nice place and--Old Uncle Bill Turner, you got him on there.

(Yeow. I got Uncle Bill Turner on here. Did you have a law down here at Welling when they had a night Marshal?)

Yes.

(Well, did you have any bad people running around?)

Well, this fellow--law--was walking you know, they had two law men here. They was pretty good now. Old Uncle Jack Christie now--that was the old judge over on Hungry Mountain. Well, now, he was the one that put me next to gettin' this place here I told you about, here on Hungry Mountain. Me and grandpa went there and he bought some cattle and got up there, he knowed the old man well--Old Uncle Jack married his sister. Nice old Indian now. He said, "How you like this country down here?" I said, "I just like it good," said, "I'd love to own me a place down here". He said, "I have a 185 acres" and grandpa says, "Where at", "On Hungry Mountain." Right down below me here. He said it joins me and grandpa asked him who owns it. Buffalo Christie, and by ned he went down there next morning--fifteen dollars. He signed up the papers, he said, "You and your dad sign."

EARLY DAY SCHOOLS

(Well, what were some of the old schools around here that you remember back in early days?)

They was this one down here, Mission, and the next one was over there at Bunch.

(At Bunch? Did they have one at Stoney Point?)
