Cecil: Well, that picture, I could get $50 for.

(My!)

Cecil: A metal frame, see, it's copper. And I'm gonna give you, see.

(Oh!)

Cecil: That's what I got that one off for you. You can turn it over. See, that's what--see, I'm gonna frame it. It's the same thing.

(Oh, yes.)

Cecil: It came out of that American Indian Exposition, Anadarko, Oklahoma. But all you, all we did was cut that out. And now you've got the picture.

Jenny: Just give her the book and she'll cut it. And the Princess of this Indian Fair was Lee's daughter. That's his granddaughter.

Cecil: This is my father.

(I've seen that Princess. She's beautiful. What is her name?)

Jenny: Oh, I forgot her name. What's her name? Maybe her names' in there.

Cecil: Her name's in there.

(Oh, yeah. It would be.)

Jenny: We have to give away when they honor her.

Cecil: There it is.

(Oh, Sharon Kay Tsatoke.)

Cecil: She's the Princess this year. (speaks in Kiowa)

Jenny: Give her the whole book.

Cecil: I just got three. I'm gonna give you that whole book. Now I ain't supposed to do that but you been pretty good to us. You visit us and--.
