

that way. Someday she's gonna be turned into a bear. And her name will be Setmatan. Setmatan. See, set is a bear. It's a bear. It's a Bear Girl. That's her--that was her Indian name. Setmatan. And that was her name. And they were going out to play, a bunch of girls and boys. And then she told her sister. She said, "Sister, I'm gonna tell you something and I want you to get it in your mind and don't forget." She said, "Well, yesterday when we were playing out there--" They'd get one of them would get in a cave. Maybe they got a place where they play. There's a big hole, I guess, and they get in there. And then this other kids they come and act like they picking plums. And then this one would run out and chase them. Just having fun, chase them. Maybe when she catch one of them, well, that one have to go in there and be a bear. When those other kids come and pick plums, well, he'll run out or she and then chase them. And they all run, you know, and just have a good time playing like that. And she said, "Yesterday when they told me to get in there, when I came out--run out to chase you children, something tell me that I'm going to turn into bear." And she said, "I just hope you don't ask me to do that today." She said, "But anyway, if they ask me to get in that cave and act like a bear, the fourth time when I run out, run for your life. And look for a place where there's,--" you know, when a she dog have little puppies, you know, just born puppies. Well, they always fix a place for them. I don't know, they build it with I don't know what and then keep their little puppies in there. They in camps. And she said, "You run to one of those places where a she-dog got little puppies. You run in there." She said, "That's the only way you gonna be saved because I'm not gonna bother that. But if you run in a tipi, I'll run somewhere
