

Couldn't get a rabbit and if she go home without the rabbit, well, she know she's gonna kill her. She said, "You bring a rabbit. You come without it, I'm gonna kill you." So she said she went way out. She start crying--crying around. She said, "I'm gonna--I'm gonna die. My sister turn into bear." There's a song for that. They got a Indian song.

(Oh, they do? Do you know it?)

Jenny: Yeah. (Jenny sings a song in Kiowa) Something like that. Setmatan--Setmatan killed everybody and left me alone and here I am wandering around. That's the way that song goes. And she was singing that song and she got way up top of a hill. And she was singing that song and her brothers were coming home. And one said, "Listen." One of them said, "Listen. I hear something crying. Listen. She's singing. It's a woman or girl." They stopped and they heard it. This girl sing that song--"Setmatan killed everybody and left me alone and here I'm wandering around, what to do." They said, "That's our sister's voice. That's our sister's voice. Setmatan." They know that their older sister was Setmatan. They listen good. "Setmatan killed everybody and left alone--that's our little sister's voice." They ran and looked for her. And they found her standing way up on the hill. And they said, "What happened?" She said, "Our sister turned into a bear and she killed our mother and our father and all the rest of the people. There's just a few men got away, but nobody came back. They afraid of her. And she told me to get a rabbit. If I come without it, she's gonna kill me." So those boys were warriors and they were fast, fast you know. And they said, "We'll kill one for you and you take it back." And they did. They killed it. They throw at it with a club just the way she
