

wanted it. That's the way they killed that rabbit. And they gave it to her and said, "You take it. And we're gonna--" They said, "We're not gonna go down there. We're gonna wait somewhere. You go down there." And towards night, first part of the night--they say when it gets dark, well, she always, she always just kind of dragging her--push her around. And tell her to do this and "If you don't do it, I'm gonna kill you like that." And this girl told everything to her brothers and said, "I don't know what I'm gonna do. I don't know what's gonna happen to me." She said that. Well, her brother said, "I guess you build fire in the tipi with, you know, poles of wood." He said, "You build a big fire and when that wood get real burning--" He said, "She's no more a girl. She don't have no pity for nobody now. She's a wild animal now. She kill her father, her mother and she's just a wild animal now."

(END OF TAPE--this story is concluded on T-329.)