

I don't know just where, but it seems to me like its a little south and west of the old place. The old place is up, its kind of a prairie place and there's a little scattered timber round jest enough to make it nice and everything.

And its high you know. They just cut it half in two and moved it over there.

(When was this built?)

You know, I don't know. It's built at different times. (words not clear) one of the first, but it was years ago.

(But it was the first in that country though?)

Oh yeah. The first (words not clear) wife, she was a Foreman you know. Why don't you come down when they have the meeting on the lake down here. I don't know who, but they got up markers on lot of those places like that. Shaw they'us named after old families like that y'know and they probably, they spell the name down there, Carlisle. That's the only thing I never been able to get that "S" outta there.

Woman: That was a big house. It was furnished with everything, dishes, bedding, --well everything.

(How big a house was it?)

Woman: Oh it was a large rooms and they built on. It was seven rooms.

They kept a buildin' on to it and it first was a just a small house, I believe it was four rooms and they commenced to addin' on and I think they jest --

Woman: I think they had to have room for the piano. Their girl that became a musician. Well they had to have a piano. I believe that's the way they got started building on. The first addition I believe was for the girl and the piano. You know where the old Benn Whittfield place is, don't you? Over close to Wauhillua. Well, now there's where he lived after the Civil War and was killed there.

Woman: That's a log house isn't it?
