

(What did you just say? Say it in English.)

Well, they call him "Star Woman." Nowadays, you look in the sky, you see some tiny shine way up there (the Pleiades).

It sparkles. It shines--that's them da^umaton. That's what they call "Star Girls."

(Would you say Star Girl again?)

da^umaton. They call them da^u means star, and maton means girl.

(End of Side A)

SIDE B

(Just a minute. He said that star-rock is still standing someplace?)

(Granddaughter: He said the rock is still there. And he said you could see the scratches. And he evidently had seen it, because he's traveled all over. He said you could see the scratches like a bear, cat, you know how it scratches. So far up on that rock about half-way. You could see the marks clear down where this bear had tried to get them. But this rock--I guess, he done told you--I already know the story-- He said this rock just kept rising, going higher.)

(Did you see that yourself?)

Yeah, back there. Somewhere there's a--I forgot the name of that rock. I forgot the name of that--that rock--I forgot the name. When I seen it down there I was traveling, going to Montana. And they tell me, they said, "You see that rock standing over there?" He said that's that rock that stands there all the time. People travel around there and go see it. It's a real rock. Oh, I'm not sure what's the name of that state.

(Is it in Wyoming?)

I think so. Yeah. I think it's in Wyoming. They say it's