

away, they just get up and go on.

(Well, where did you stay during that time?)

Well, I couldn't tell you. I ain't got no sense! (He laughs.)

(Well, I think you've got some sense.)

I stay with my mother, that's how far and my great-grandma.

That's as far as I know.

(Did you all live in the same tipi?)

No! We got different tipi. Great-great-grandma got her own tipi and so do the other people. We don't live in the same place.

(Whose tipi did you live in?)

I live in that great-great grandma's Yellow Robe.

(Yellow Robe?)

Her name is Yellow Robe.

(Where did your mother live?)

Well, she camp out there by herself. Yeah. Oh, I wish you could see that Sun Dance! There's a lot of people. Those days there was a lot of people that were still living. And you could hear the drums--one over here, one over there, one over there, one over there. Lot of excitement.

(I bet that was really something to see.)

Yeah. That's right.

(You know, we were just wondering what the camps looked like in those days. And, you know, the place that you lived with your great-grandmother, were there very many other people camped near you?)

Oh, yes. They camp around--circle around.

(Well, after they scattered, after the dance broke up, did you go with many other people?)

I couldn't tell you. I ain't got no sense. (He means he was
