

hill. That's why they always run to the mountain. But things like that happen in (unintelligible). But long time; not in our days when we grow up. But it's way back there.

(Did they ever fight the Cheyennes or Arapahoes?)

Jenny: Yes. Pawnees, they say Pawnees were bad.

(Oh, is that right?)

Jenny: Uh-huh. They say they really sneak up on a camp, the Pawnee. They were just like--how you call Chinese or Japanese or whatever--they get way up on a tree and--. Pawnee were (unintelligible) nickname.

STORY ABOUT PAWNEE TRYING TO STEAL KIOWA BABY

They said in night time they'll come around when they're in camps. They say one time they were all sleeping in a tipi. And they had a man, a wife and his baby and they were right by the tent where it's tied down. They said a man put a hand in there and pull out that baby. Just grab that baby and this baby woke up, screaming and hollering. And that woman said, "Get up, Get up. Something's getting our baby." This man jumped up and got his arrow. He hold on to that baby--wouldn't let him go. He run out and went around that tipi. That man was pulling that baby out. He shoot him with that arrow and kill him. He was a Pawnee. They had hair right here. Right here, all that shaved.

Granddaughter: Why did he want the baby?

Jenny: I don't know. Take it off like the rest of them always do. Babies and then they raise them. See, if this man took this baby and took it home, the baby would grow up in their tribe. In our tribe, Kiowa, we got a lot of half-breeds that they take from the white man, Spanish and Mexicans. There's such very few full-blooded
