

organization like this, wherever it may be, dancing, war dancing. So today, we want to thank you that you now express how we feel and we explain it, but are trying to do the best thing and we appreciate it. Trying to show our appreciation how you feel towards this young man that we have. What little gifts we are going to make may not be much, may not go 'round, but you might overlook us, pity us. We--she has another young man that's leaving for Vietnam--another grandson, and I hope that God may bring 'em all back home to us so we might enjoy life again. Thank you.

Wallace: May Bohay-- (Song lasts for about 3 minutes.)

Unidentified Man: ...he said, "We have had some misfortunes in our family," but he said, "I had other plans and I didn't have plans to do this today, but things has changed today." He said, "I didn't intend to camp," but he said "I came anyway." He said, "My thought was here and I had good thoughts regardless to what had happened in the past." They lost a loved one and just recently, they also lost another loved one. Because he said "Today, my son come to me. He asked the permission from me." He said "I want to continue. We can't change anything. Things have hsppered, it's gone." So we want to try to do the things in memory of my son. He said to her, I know that in his thoughts. Got permission from his mother, says, "I want to do this today to help for the pleasures I've had." Says, "I've been away, come back and do this in behalf--in memory of my son." So she said she accepted that. "It's all right. I'm glad you came to me son and told me this." She said, "Now I want to do likewise, the way you gonna go. I'm gonna go at it this way." How about helping out today?
