

By sticking with him and going with him all the way, instead of dropping him somewhere along the way and leaving him when supposedly the need is there for someone to help him. My job primarily, concerns me with Indian students in the public schools and of course I'm interested in that phase. Our Indian students, today, need a lot of help, Indian families need a lot of help, uh, there's a lot of ways that we can influence and encourage so that we don't go half way like we have before and ended there and whenever we get ready, to start over. So I believe in an organization like this is going to be an asset to our community to our people, to our tribe, everybody involved. But again, its going to take probably a hundred and ten per cent for a long time, in order to get it off the ground. I think this is where we want to appeal more than anything else, is to get in there and stay with it and not end it in a few months or a few weeks. But to set a goal and from now and few years from now, we can look back and visualize this meeting, -- same meeting here and look at the advances we've made, and at the improvements that we have caused in the various Indian communities and have a personal satisfaction for helping our fellow man and there's just an awful lot that we can do and I know that you have ideas that you would like to bring out and this is something that we can all benefit from by discussing it freely as we are now. Tommy Johnson, do you have anything to say?

Tommy Johnson: Well; what I came down here for well, I had a thought in my mind that it was a great big thing. I'd just been there for sometime after that started up that day--had a meetin' up there--their planning resource outfit and they's tellin' us we're gonna have to think up some sort of development for the government to put on that land out north of town here and so it set my mind to movin' and I don't know that we could form up anything that we'd get by with on it. But like we was to bring in one business that
