

and that meat went past him. And he jumped up. Well, this meat thought he was about dead but after he passed him, well, he jumped up and chased that meat. He chased that meat and just--this pound meat rolled fast. And he went and chased it. And there was a big creek there. And so this pound meat, just to get away from Sainday. I don't know why, but that's the story. But it looks like he stop and let him eat all he wants. Anyway it roll and roll in that big creek, in the water. He didn't know what to do. When he got in there that meat had some grease. It was mixed with fat. Well, it melted and that, right on top of that water, was that grease, came up like that from that meat. He was so mad. He said, "Well, anyway, I'm gonna dripk enough of that water cause that grease is in there." He got in there and drink all that--all he can. But anyway, he got sick drinking all that water with all that grease. And that's where that meat, it just disappeared. But that's the way they say he cheats. He even cheat that roll of pound meat.

(What was the name you called that pounded meat?)

Jenny: Sempki

(Sempki?)

Jenny: Yes. Oh, it's really good. I'd eat like Sainday if I had some.

(You know there's two words that always sound alike to me in Kiowa, and that's the word for man and the word for meat. Aren't they sort of alike?)

Jenny: Meat is gi.

(Gi?)

Jenny: Yeah and man is k'áhi. K'áhi, man, k'áhi.

(K'áhi.)
