

Jenny: Gopkiagw.

Cecil: Gop.

Jenny: Yeah, gopkiagw.

Cecil: Oh, gopkiagw. That's gopkiagw.

(Is this sweet medicine the one they put on the fire to burn it?)

Cecil: No. I'll get you some of that. But don't you give that away. Like I said, I use it for my lecture. And when I go to lecture in Kansas, Texas or somewhere in a big church, a white church, I take that and that's what they use. I've got that they use on a fire.

(Oh, you do?)

Jenny: Yes. He uses that when he's got bad cold. He's got better teeth than I have. He bites it off and he chews it. He said it really helps him but I never did try to use it. I ain't got no teeth to chew it with.

(This peyote, did you say it helps the headache?)

Jenny: Well, anything--if you got the pain somewhere or you're sick. There's a lot of sick peoples. But you have to take that fur off.

(Oh, you do?)

SWEET SMELLING CEDAR REFERRED TO IN THE BIBLE

Cecil: (unintelligible) Now, you smell it. That's what they use.

(Uh-huh. Oh, it smells good.)

Cecil: Oh, that sure smells. It's a cedar but it's not a cedar like this out here. That cedar never become a tree. It grows in a bush about that high. And it grows over here on her father's place, on that hill--right on top of here.

(It does?)
