

when you want to attract attention, why the odor, they smell the odor and then they make--they call it love grass.

(They do? How do you say that?)

Cecil: A se' og' a. A se' og' a.

(A se' og' a.)

SALT WAS USED BY INDIANS TO CLEAN THEIR TEETH

Jenny: This here, sometimes they chew it and keep it in their mouths for say, like Listerine. Yeah, it makes their breath smell good.

(Did they ever have any, back in the old days, did they have anything to clean their teeth or the enamel or anything?)

Jenny: The only thing I know, they use salt.

(They do?)

Jenny: Of course, they ain't got no toothbrush, but I don't know how they brush.

Cecil: Let me talk. Have you got anything to attract attention when you want to make love? (unintelligible) She might go over there and make love to her husband again.

Jenny: But anyway, they use some of that to make their breath smell sweet.

Cecil: I'll tell you where you can get that. The Wichitas generally have a lot of that. It's a seed. I had some long time ago. It's kind of a light--it's kind of a yellow, little yellow. You can't find it now. There's too many cattle. They claim they eat it all up. I did have little bit of it but I sold it to somebody. I just forgot just who. He wanted it. And it's awful strong.

Jenny: A long time before this country opened up, we were small, you know--no section road, no highways, nothing. Just pasture, no
