

(Yeah I guess the last one that was made was about in 1910. 1915)

Uh-hum. I remember them.

(The old muzzle loader. Yeah. You've used them too.)

I never used any, but I saw them

(You saw them)

Uh-huh. My grandpa, he had one.

(Yeah)

We had two cousins, they owned them. Course we lived pretty close to them. We always lived about--lived I guess about nine miles from my grandfather. And these guys brought that old gun down one day you know. And he (words not clear)

(Yeah)

He supposed to kill a crow one day. And just scared that old crow. And that old gun kicked him back.

(Well, he put one of those on top of another?)

That was my cousin that done that. They's all time doing something mean.

(Yeah. They played a trick on him.)

(two sentences of conversation not clear)

ENTERTAINMENT IN EARLY DAYS

(Well I sure don't blame you. Old time square dances and that's about all you all had to go to. Wasn't it? Saturday night. Back in those older days.)

Yeah and some give play parties.

(Yeah. Had good music?)

Oh it was average.

(Yeah. Fiddlers and guitarists?)

Just a fiddle and guitar. They didn't have a bunch of things.

(How many fiddlers? Do they have lots of fiddlers in those days?)

Yes sir. Quite a few fiddlers.
