

ran over there and they stand on there. The bear was coming close and they all stand on that. They know she's going to kill them if she come on them. They all stood on that flat rock and just when she got close, that rock raised up. It just go up and just took them up. And then she got there and she jumped, tried to catch them. She jumped up and couldn't reach them and just went like that with her fingernails, just like that. That rock was growed up high and they were up there. And this bear, when she jumped-- it was a rock, you know--it broke her toes and nails. And they said it made a mark on that rock. It just hurt and hurt herself and there she just died. And this--they were up there and when they know the bear fell down and just died. And maybe this rock had something to do with her death because she bump on that big rock. And she was running so fast that this rock growed up and she bump herself on that big rock. And just broke up her nails and toes. And they saw her fell down and she died. And this rock talked to them--I don't know how long they stayed up there. But it said, "What ya'll want to do?" It said, "You want to get back down to this earth. The one that was chasing you all is dead. Whatever you want to do, I'll do that for you all. If you want to come down to the earth again"--they must be way up there. It said, "If you want to come down to the earth or you want to go up there, whichever way you want to do." So the girl said--she was so scared, so afraid to come down and she said, "I want to go up there and be a star," and that's what happened. That rock happened to go up there and they became a star. And there was boys but they all say it was a star girl because she's the one that choose this way. And to this day, the night, like we said, the night when the stars are shining bright,