

travel sometimes with the moon. When the moon goes down, well, the stars'll go. Well, just cause they're way up over your head. That's when you could see.

(Well, would that be towards morning or in the evening?)

Jenny: Well, that would be first part of the night.

(First part of the night and they'd be way above your head. And how about these old men with the peace pipe, about where in the sky would they be?)

Jenny: They're around there too. You see them.

(Are they close to that group of five?)

Jenny: Yeah, and like the white people say there's a dipper up there. Wonder how come they say that?

(Well, I guess, you know to them the way those stars are placed, it reminds them of a shape of a dipper. I guess there's probably a story behind that too.)

Jenny: I know that dipper, too. I can see it plain, just plain.

(Interruption)

(This dipper now, is that what the white people call the dipper? Now is that different from this?)

Jenny: No, it's the same thing.

(It's the star girl and her brothers?)

Jenny: But they don't say her brothers. They always just say Damatan. But they say Star Girls. But it's the boys--her brothers that took her away, away from that bear--their sister. But they--because the girl made a plan to go up and not come back to the earth, she was so scared and didn't want to come down. So I guess the brothers, I don't know how, but it's just a story, you know. And then they say the Star Girls. They don't say boys. Maybe it's
