

(Uh-huh)

It's called the Polston Cemetery.

(Polston):

Polston. Used to be the Polston, used to own that prairie. John Ridge--you've heard so much about John Ridge--

(Yeah.)

He used to be--he was killed there. Right there at graveyard.

(Is that right?)

Yeah. Yeah, I could take you about where the old house is.

(Well)

Where he was stabbed. They killed him, the Nighthawks come in there one night and drug him out. You know all about that--read about it. And uh-- he was buried there. So Stand Watie then, he's buried at that cemetery, Peters Prairie, Polston Cemetery. And it's on Peters Prairie you know. That big prairie there. And Stand Watie is buried there too. I know when they unveiled his monument at (word, not clear). Stand Watie he was buried down here on Grand River. And the historical society got it all mixed up. And they put his monument up there.

(Well.)

You find out from these historical fellers--you find out in Grove there I think where he was going to be big man there. Where they have one of them fellers. I know they come out to Grove there--certain time of the year they come up in them big buses you know.

(Yeah.)

Go visit them places.

(Uh-huh.)

Now John Ridge he's buried up there.

(Now they were prominent Indians.)

Oh yeah, yeah they was.
