

acres where I live.

(Uh-huh, And uh--you mentioned a place called Dodge. Was it a little settlement?)

Yeah it was a little--used to have an elevator and mill.

(Well.)

And there was a mill there.

(An elevator?)

Oh, yeah.

(And mill.)

They had uh--little store, grocery store--and uh--big brick building. They sold everything. And it just finally went down to nothing. Everything moved away from there.

(Well.)

Yeah.

(Not even a store there.)

No, not a thing there. Used to be a post office there. Only one in the country, you know.

(Now, it's out there on the flats, the prairie, isn't it?)

Yeah. Land was awful good right around the river there.

(Now was it on Peters Prairie?)

No, it was on Cowskin Prairie.

(Oh, Cowskin Prairie.)

Uh-huh. Cowskin Prairie, yeah.

(It's another one of those old towns that's gone now.)

Yeah, oh, yeah. Yeah.

(Well, I've heard of this place called Zena. Now where is it from here?)

Well, it's uh--remember passing Delaware Church House way (words not clear)
