

And we have seen miracles performed in these Church Houses. It's really wonderful. And as we go on, we go on to the second cross mark. And again here, the singing goes on, but the fireman, he gets up and builds his fire and as it goes along, they go on. It goes back to the -- up to the "Road Man" And again, they pause again. And at that time, the Osages, when they first had this peyote, a lot of men attended and they say about that time, the time would be about midnight. And so at midnight it was the start of a new day and such as that. And they paused for meditation and prayer-- (a woman says "special prayer"). There would be a special prayer for that. And they would rebuild their fire and (woman interrupts again) -- And they would have people-- anyone who wanted any special prayer would be-- this was the time to do it. (Woman interrupts, "this was the privilege given to all the people that were there".) The people's congregation you might say, was their privilege to ask for a special prayer at that time, and they even would -- anyone would want a special blessing or a special prayer at that time, they would contact the "Road Man" and he would, if he so desired, he would have the person that wanted a special prayer to stand in front of the altar, behind the fire. And there he would tell the "Road Man" and the Almighty, just what he wanted. And then in turn the "Road Man" would say a prayer for him. And in turn the people of the Church would get up and with their feathers they would fan this person off. And there are many ways that people fan these persons off. And it signifies that they want any evil spirits that's around them or any sickness -- We have a great respect for the feathers that are taken in these meetings. And that's a story all its own. And how it came to be. And so on through the night as the drum is started again, the Drum Chief would retire it (?) and the first -- the Road Man would summon the First Fireman, and then it was his duty to carry the drum around the circle. And before he started, he would call the Second Fireman up. And the second fireman would come up and he would ask permission to build the fire, go get the wood, which was granted. So he pulled all
