

I imagine there was cotton.

(Cotton. It was tied up and how large was this ball. About six inches? About like the modern softball?)

It was a hardball.

(No, it's about like that. Wasn't it?)

Uh-huh.

(About six inches.)

Little bit bigger than a softball.

(Now when these two teams uh squared off and a game got under way..they would pass this ball to each other. And at each end of the field, how long would they usually call the field was. I mean the length of the field where they played? Did it vary where they could play in a small area...they could play in a larger one couldn't they?)

It could be small area or else, if it's a bigger why the distance are longer.

If it's small well the distance is short.

(And at each end of this field, what kind of goals did they have?)

They just had a plain mark.

(What did they have to do with the ball? Did they hit the ball through the marking?)

No, they have to go over.

(What kind of marking did they have? Ah...just kind of in the ground?)

Just in the ground. They just kind of marked the ground.

(With a stick of some sort. How did they put that stick and mark the ground like, that uh...seems to me that then if that ball passed over that mark, that would have scored as one point)

Yes.

(And uh...you recalled that that was played uh a place right west of Hominy. The first time you recall it?)

Yes. Yes.
