

Yes.

(Uh. In this game called "shinny" what was actually the Indian name for that game?)

They call it (Osage name)

(Osage name) (laughter)

That was the name of it. (Osage name). That's what I remember. At that time.

(At the time you were out there playing and uh it seemed that...it seemed to me that after a few years...the interest kind of dwindled. They more or less kind of lost interest in the game of "shinny". But you know like ah this game, do these other tribes surrounding the Osage did they play "shinny" too. Did they take it up from the Osages?)

Well, I wouldn't know that.

AS INTEREST IN SHINNY GAME DWINDLED, WAR DANCES BECAME POPULAR

(And uh..when the time that we were kind of interest kind of we got some other interest. Do you recall what else you're doing at the time? I mean each spring. What did...the pow wows come or did they? What happened? Did we start dancing or what was the reason that we didn't play "shinny" anymore? Do you recall I mean when you were...do you remember what you did each spring? Say along about that time after we didn't play "shinny"?)

Well, I remember. I guess the regular war dances maybe took place.

(Well, I don't remember that's kind of before my time little bit. Did uh..at that time...do you recall what happened to war dance? I remember we went down to uh Craterville about that time. Do you recall those trips down there?)

No. But uh...I use to hear of people going to other tribes to dance.

(I mean uh...like uh...do you recall about the years that uh...we had all those Kiowa visitors come up. That Mr. (name not clear) and all these. People. Must of been around in the middle twenties or something like that.)
