

(Yeah. I wonder how it got its name. It would be interesting to find out.)

See George's boy, taught school there, two or three years. You know.

(Sentence not clear.)

Mrs. Payne: I did have. I wouldn't know where to find it.

(Inaudible--static)

EARLY DAY FARMING - TOWNS OF DUPREE, GORE, AND AFTON

(Leonard, where were you raised?)

Dupree

(And you seen that country grow up there too, haven't you?)

You mean up here.

(Yeah)

Yeah, I seen it grow. Where we lived between Vinita and Bluejacket.

(Yeah)

Where dad's place used to be. Uh-huh. That's about east of us.

(Up in that Timbered Hill--)

No just south.

(Just south of Timbered Hill.)

Timbered Hill--Yeah--About three or four mile.

(Uh-huh)

Mrs. Payne: I grew up about half way between Gore and Afton.

(Uh-huh)

Mrs. Payne: (not clear)

(Yeah but I notice there at Afton this past summer the amount of grain that was being hauled in there. And I believe there's more farming around Afton than anyplace I've seen.)

Yeah.

(Uh, was it like that in the early days, too?)

Mrs. Payne: Yes, they used to raise even more grain than they do now. They had more corn, oats, and wheat.

(Uh-huh)
